ANOTHER CRISIS

THE Republican legislature of Michigan, which has been engaged in a 12-year war with Democratic Governor Wm. (Soapy) Williams, was forced to increase the state's revenue several months ago, and it reluctantly increased the sales tax from three to four cents, only to face a more serious crisis now that the courts have ruled the increase is illegal.

Now the state finds itself confronted with the problem of refunding some fourteen million dollars collected at the rate of one cent on the dollar for clothing, groceries, and the like, and accumulated debts of more than seventy million dollars with no revenue coming in to pay them.

It is simple for outsiders to place the blame either on the democratic governor, or the republican legislature, according to one's political party affiliations, but it is a serious matter for one of the richest states in the Union to face bankruptcy because of partisan politics. And that's exactly what it boils down to in Michigan.

There is no secret about Williams being the political creature of the United Automobile Workers Union. And there is no secret about him doing the bidding of Walter Reuther, who has always insisted on the state getting what additional revenue it needs through income taxes on corporations.

It so happens that people of the entire state elect a Chief Executive, and when all the people vote the democrats win because the UAW supports the democratic ticket. When they elect members of the legislature the story is different. Each county elects its own representatives, and there are more rural counties than urban and they are overwhelmingly republican. Hence for twelve years, while Williams has been Governor, he has had a republican legislature which refuses to enact an income tax.

Unlike most states, Michigan's constitution forbids the creation of debt to pay operating expenses. Hence when there isn't enough revenue to meet the payroll employees go unpaid, and they are getting mighty tired of "payless pay-days" in Michigan.

A recent survey of possible additional revenue from an income tax on corporations indicates a tax of 25% on all over 6% net earnings by General Motors alone for the first nine months of 1959 would wipe out the state debt and insure operations in the black for months to come, and the 25% excise levy is the one Walter Reuther has insisted on for years. He has blocked every effort to modify the levy and republican politicians have insisted that such a tax would cause hundreds of industries to leave the state as many are already doing on account of union restrictions.

At a recent meeting of publishers who subscribe to the United Press International news service an agreement was reached that the only solution to the state's new crisis is an entirely new administration, including the Governor and legislature, regardless of party affiliations. And it looks to outsiders that a clean sweep is what is needed.

There was a time when hard heads could be cracked against one another, even across party lines, and good results could be achieved. But that was before the phenomenon of a labor union with a million members voting exactly like folks do in Soviet Russia. The "rule of ruin" policy has worked remarkably well for labor unions, but it has never made much of a success in politics, especially in a rich state like Michigan.

Saver Is Only --

serve policies have been working as planned.

The future of our country certainly depends upon the saver having confidence in the American dollar. We must realize there can be no saver without someone willing to save the money and forgo the pleasure of spending it for a return on his money called interest. In the third quarter of 1959 personal savings dropped to 6% per cent of individual income after taxes. This is the smallest share saved in 4 years. In the last few years the percentage of savings has been running over 7 per cent.

The persistent upward drift of labor cost per year in output has not yet been solved. Business will be under continuing pressure to moderate the rise in their cost through, among other things, the building of new and more efficient production facilities. The financing of these outlays will require a large amount of borrowing, and in turn a large amount of savings.

The average amount of capital necessary per worker today is about $15,000. There will be something like a half million new entrants into the labor force each year during the past decade.

If we are to maintain the rate of growth per capital per worker, and this must be done unless we are willing to settle for less productivity per worker, we must shortly expect to step up our rate of net capital formation by something like 8 billion dollars per year. To further complicate this situation, the volume of personal savings may not rise as much with the increase of income during the 60s as has been the case in the past. There will be a population increase of 28 millions during the coming decade. The deep swing in the birth rate down to its low in the 1930s and up to the high plateau maintained to the present has resulted in widely different numbers of people in successive generations. This age structure will be relatively unfavorable to the individual savings and third investments. The most rapid accumulation of savings takes place between the ages of 35 and 55. The high savings group however will increase by only 3 per cent by 1970. The 35 to 55 age group which ranks second in savings will increase only 18 per cent during the coming decade. On the other hand the number of people in the low savings, high consumption 15 to 20 age bracket is expected to rise as high as 50 per cent during the next 10 years. Given the growth trends and spreading patterns of these groups, it is clear that the volume of personal savings may not rise as much with the increase in income that has normally been the case in the past.

A more recent development has made it imperative that the value of the dollar be maintained, and that inflation be halted. The United States has been losing gold to the rest of the world in its balance of payments in world trade. A large loss of gold would have very serious consequences on the monetary situation here in America. The excess of exports in United States goods and services over our imports is currently running at the rate of about 3 billion dollars a year. This excess is not sufficient to meet 3 large categories of outpayments by the United States: payment by the United States in aggregate amounts to about 7 1/2 billions a year. These payments consist of about 3 billions of military expenditures abroad; second, U.S. government grants, loans and other capital which amounts to 2 1/2 billions a year; third, outflow of private capital which amounts to 2 billions or more a year. Inflation is one of the causes that has caused America to become a high cost producer. We are becoming underbid in the world markets. We only have to look about the streets of Murray and see many hundreds of foreign cars. I understand that most of the cars we are now using are made in Belgium. We are now exporting certain types of lumber to Japan where this lumber is manufactured into plywood and then shipped back to America and sold cheaper than our American plywood manufacturers can manufacture the product here. This is certainly a most serious situation for the United States to find itself in, for we have always been regarded as the most producing country that could produce at low cost through our advance technology and automation programs.

If inflation forces us to remain the high cost producing nation then we will soon be importing more than we export in goods. This will surely mean a more severe loss of gold in order for us to settle our balance of payments. Gold still serves its age old function as a means of international settlement and a national monetary reserve. To do this it moves from one country to another country in accordance with the payment balances and the monetary policy of the most leading countries of the world. Many countries could have taken gold from the United States in the last recent month but have chosen to take bank deposits and short term investments in this country instead.

Because we have increased the interest rates on these investments we have been able to hold this money in the United States. Now if we lower these interest rates to any degree this money will be converted to gold and this gold will leave the United States.

Now, let us examine the effect of the monetary policy that the Federal Government has had upon the American dollar. The Government cannot expect to keep interest rates from rising as long as it has to finance a large budgetary deficit in times of prosperity. The effect of a deficit under these conditions is inflationary and tends to discourage savings on the part of the public and increases the need for credit. One of the most effective ways to relieve upward pressure on interest rates when business activity is high is to have a large surplus in the Federal Government budget in order for the Treasury not to be competing with other users of credit.

When the Federal Government borrows money from banks, you really get inflation. This is an example of how the Federal Government borrowing from the banks adds to the money supply. Suppose the Treasury wishes to write checks for 100 million dollars starting tomorrow morning but the treasurer is out of money. They will call the bank and ask "Will you loan us 100 million dollars at 4 1/2 per cent for 6 months if we will send you over a check for that effect?" The banker would probably say yes. Where would he get the 100 million dollars with which to credit the account of the U.S. Treasury? Will he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely credit that much money subject to Reserve requirements by crediting the Treasury's account in the U.S. Treasury. Will he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely credit that much money subject to Reserve requirements by crediting the Treasury's account in the U.S. Treasury. Will he take it from the account of someone else? No, certainly not. He would merely credit that much money subject to Reserve requirements by crediting the Treasury's account in the U.S. Treasury.

By that approach had the same degree of monetization as if the Treasury had called down to the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and said print us up 100 million dollars worth of greenbacks which I can pay out tomorrow.

Now unless the steel strike upsets the economy to such an extent that the Federal budget is upset, in 1960 the Treasury will be operating with a balanced budget.

The policy of the Federal Reserve Board with its Chairman, Mr. Martin, is that they will not create new money that could promote and support a higher level of prices at the present time. They do not intend to supply the U. S. Government with new money to pay the Treasury's bills if they are not covered by tax revenues.

In summation, money is tighter and interest rates higher than they have been in a generation. It is questionable that long term mortgages will even be available in any quantity in the near future.

This condition has been brought about in part by a business boom that has generated a greater demand for credit than there is a supply of funds available.

This situation has also been brought by the Federal Reserve Board's policy to stabilize the American dollar and to halt inflation. Some of the reasons that this policy of halting inflation is imperative are:

1. The people who have been saving and did not speculate have suffered severely in recent years. The saver was beginning to lose confidence in the American dollar and since savings are the root of our capitalistic system and since future population trends make it imperative that a large amount of savings are made available for capital formation, it is very im-

S. Marshall Rebels Open Season Tonite

The South Marshall Rebels coached by Mason Cope and Ray Solomon will open their cage season with visiting Ballard Memorial tonite.

South enjoyed a good season last year winning 21 games and losing only 6 as it was clouted from the running by rival North in the district play-off. The Rebels came after a much talked about triumph over Murray Douglas 73-58 in the Bulldogs first fourth District competition.

When the Rebels entered the high school play-off, their team was in third place in the won and lost standings of the district topped only by North Marshall Mathis, a top scorer on the squad, was fifth in the individual standings of per game averages.

The Rebels were hard hit by graduation losing seven players: Mathis, Bohannon, Margan, Darrell, and Schroeder were in the group lost. Phillips Wilkins and Jackie Mohler were the only regulars that returned from the 58-59 roster.

South again does not have good height but the Rebels have managed to compensate a lack of height with added speed in the back. The tallest the roster can bolster this year are three experienced cagers at the 6' mark. Wilkins and Mohler are back 5'11 1/2.

important that his condition be corrected.

2. The stock market had appeared to have started on a speculative binge and the Federal Reserve feared the consequences of a later collapse.

3. There has developed an outflow of gold from the United States in the last few months due to the United States becoming a high cost producer because of inflationary pressures.

It is a false idea to think bankers control this situation and are greatly benefited by high interest rates. On the contrary, this condition causes the banks to pay increased interest rates for savings deposits and time funds and depreciates the values of mortgages and bonds already held in large amounts by the banking system.

At present this offsets many benefits arising from the increase in interest rates. The real beneficiaries of high interest rates will be the millions of people who put their money in Savings Accounts, Building and Loan Associations, and insurance policies, or those who purchase savings bonds or mortgages at the present high interest rates, in short the savers are the ones to benefit.

Bowl Picture Expected To Be Much Clearer After Saturday's College Football Program

By JOHN GRIFFIN

United Press International

The post-season bowl picture may be jumbled and fuzzy right now, but it should start coming in clearer after this Saturday's big program of college football games.

Northwestern, Washington, Oregon, Louisiana State, Syracuse, Penn State, Kansas, Texas, Air Force, Mississippi, and Georgia all are in position where a big win could put them definitely in focus for one of those golden New Year's Day invitations.

With only three Saturdays left in the 1959 season, here's the bowl situation:

ROSE — Northwestern (6-0) can clinch a tie for first place in the Big Ten and thus put one foot in the bowl by making good as a six-point pick over Wisconsin (if Purdue loses). In the West, Washington and Oregon (each 6-1) are front-running for the bowl berth and each is favored by 13 Saturday, Washington over Oregon State and Oregon over California.

SUGAR — National Champion Louisiana State (7-0) is in line for a return appearance but faces a tough assignment as seven-point pick over Tennessee. Mississippi (6-1) remains a possibility, too, despite a 7-3 loss to LSU last week and is a prohibitive choice this week over Chattanooga. Other possibilities are Clemson (5-1) and the runnerup team in the Southwest Conference.

ORANGE — There's a report Syracuse (6-0) will get a bid if it beats Penn State (also 6-0) in their showdown for the Eastern championship. Penn State, a seven-point underdog, also is a possibility. Kansas (4-3) can clinch a tie for first place in the Big Eight and put one foot in the bowl by beating Colorado.

COTTON — Texas (7-0) should move closer to host berth by fulfilling 16-point odds over Baylor. The Air Force (4-1-1), a possible foe, is favored by seven over Missouri. Other possibilities — Mississippi, Syracuse, Penn State.

GATOR — Georgia (6-1) a strong possibility, is a three-point pick over Florida. Other possibilities — Mississippi, Arkansas, Syracuse, Penn State.

The Missouri-Air Force game will be seen on television screens in the West. Eastern viewers will see a battle in which Pittsburgh is favored by just one point over Boston College.

Northwestern, Texas, Syracuse, Penn State, and Louisiana State are among seven major teams risking unbeaten and untied records Saturday. The others are bowl-ineligible Southern California, a 21-point favorite over West Virginia.

START PRODUCTION AT KAISER STEEL MILL—While the nationwide strike among the major steel producers continues, the first steel flows from an open hearth furnace at the Kaiser steel mill in Fontana, Calif., shut down for 105 days. Kaiser and two other smaller producers have settled with separate contracts with the United Steelworkers Union. In the meantime, the U.S. Supreme Court issued an order which will prolong the steel strike for a week. Acting on an appeal by the union, the court agreed to a review of an injunction which would have sent the 500,000 strikers back to work for 90 days.

PROVIDENCE, R. I. — (AP) — Edward C. Stokes, 26, is a man of varied activities and interests. He majored in philosophy at the University of Southern California; manages a Providence theater; conducts a 15-minute Sunday radio show on music and the arts; works mornings as an insurance claims adjuster. He's also married and helps raise five children.

Of his radio show, Stokes said, "It's the closest I can get to using the subjects I liked most in college." Why the other jobs?

"Easy," says Stokes. "There comes a time in every man's life when he has to temper his idealism with the hard, cold fact that one has to eat."

Babies Boost Business

By GAY PAULEY
UPI Women's Editor
NEW YORK (UPI) — Mrs. Helen Dorsey of Los Angeles holds a celebration every time the government announces a birth rate increase.

With good reason. The more babies, the better her business. The soft-spoken, gray-haired woman is president of a company which claims to be the world's largest manufacturer of all-plastic, plastic-coated, and plastic-lined baby pants and bits.

"A baby is born every seven seconds...four million 200-thousand a year," said Mrs. Dorsey happily. "We sell 18 million pairs of pants, and do a $5 million dollar volume annually."

Mrs. Dorsey, in New York on business, discussed in an interview the problems a woman faces when out of necessity she becomes boss of a business with 300 employees, mostly women, dependent on her.

Husband Dies Suddenly
"My husband founded the company 12 years ago," she said. "When he died suddenly in 1954, I had no choice but to take over. I wasn't going to be one of those widows caught with nothing to do but a dead round of parties."

"Fortunately my husband always had discussed business matters with me. I had gone on many business trips with him. I knew many of his associates. That helped."

"I would advise any wife to encourage her husband to talk shop at home. For unfortunately, the statistics show she is apt to outlive him."

"I had another advantage in that I knew many of my husband's employees. I'm sure some of them suspected that I couldn't take over, and I frankly wasn't sure. I spent a lot of sleepless nights. I still do."

Remember Husband's Creed
The president, a woman in her early 50's, said there was no one secret to being a successful boss. "I always remember my husband's credo, though," she added. "When you make a business deal, you have to sit on both sides of the table."

"I have also found that an able executive, man or woman, must delegate authority—but remember where it's delegated. You have to look at the overall land not get bogged down with detail. And you have to look always for some way to improve your product."

"I also had to learn how to organize my time. I'd never had any business experience...I had been a professional pianist."

"I don't think employees resent working for women," said Mrs. Dorsey. "After all, there are a lot of women in big jobs with men working for them. I hope my people look at me not for what I am, but for what I do."

More injuries are suffered by Americans 15 through 24 years old than any other age group. For every 100 persons in that bracket, there were 33 injuries during a recent year, according to the Health Insurance Institute.

for convenience sake get an electric clothes dryer!

If you could only choose the kind of weather you want on washday, you'd have one problem licked. Still, you'd have to lug and lift clothes to the line and back — a chore unnecessary with an electric dryer.

There's more convenience — put the dryer where you want it, there's no flame or flue.

And clothes, even new miracle fabrics dry beautifully bright — brighter than when dried in sunshine (which there's not too much of these winter months).

So for convenience sake, ORDER YOUR ELECTRIC CLOTHES DRYER TODAY.

THANK YOU

During the year of 1939, you the people of Calloway County, instituted a great favor upon a mother, a dad, a young son and a daughter when you elected that dad as your Circuit Court Clerk.

Twenty years rolled by and the adults of yester year and their descendants, the young men and women of today, elected that same man State Representative of Calloway County.

Speaking in behalf of my family as well as myself, I, the recipient of your votes on both occasions, want to thank each of you from the youngest to the eldest for the esteem and respect which you have shown me in each of my respective races.

If I am fortunate enough to tread far out into the snowy years of winter, many times I will pause and think in terms of the fall of life when your votes fell upon me like so many autumn leaves.

Thank you again,

er of public relations and Adams or Kingsley will probably share the jobs of public relations and press secretary to the governor. Mack Sisk, who once was director of publicity under former Gov. Wetherby, very likely will be named to manage the State Fairgrounds at Louisville. Wendell Ford of Owensboro, an attorney who once was national president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, will head a section of the Department of Economic Development which is due to undergo a reorganization during the General Assembly session.

Other probable appointees of the governor-elect include: Jess Taylor of Frankfort or former Aeronautics Commissioner Charles Gartrell of Ashland will be appointed to the post of aeronautics commissioner. Taylor, a retired naval captain, who now flies for May was the pilot of the plane furnished for Combs' use during the campaign by May. A surprise appointment will be the promotion of the present Deputy Commissioner of Public Safety James E. Bassett to head that department. Bassett, a graduate of Harvard and a former Marine officer, served as the top assistant to Public Safety Commissioner Don S. Sturgill for the past three years.

The election returns, which are now virtually complete, show that Combs and Wyatt, together broke three records in their landslide victory. Combs, who polled 494,448 votes to 329,915 for John M. Robison Jr. with 3,601 out of the 3,764 precincts reported topped the previous record plurality for a gubernatorial race that had been set by Gov. A. B. Chandler in 1955.

Wyatt, whose victory margin now stands at 187,201 votes, ran up the largest plurality in any statewide race in history. It topped the 181,212 vote margin by which Alben W. Barkley defeated M. H. Thatcher for the Senate in 1932.

Wyatt's plurality also was the highest in history for a lieutenant governor candidate. With 3,579 out of 3,764 precincts reported, Wyatt had 481,164 votes to 292,963 for Republican Pleaz W. Mobley.

ONE GREAT CERTAINTY

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Day	Book	Chapter	Verses
Sunday	Exodus	4	1-4
Monday	Psalm	102	15-28
Tuesday	Daniel	2	26-28
Wednesday	Hebrews	1	9-12
Thursday	Hebrews	11	6-12
Friday	Psalm	115	15-18
Saturday	Psalm	1	1-4

We go back to the old homestead, the old home town. Perhaps we have long anticipated that visit, but now we find that the changes are so disillusioning that we don't care whether we ever return. We meet a friend of years gone by and hardly recognize him. He too has changed. We compare the face reflected from our mirror with old photographs and realize that, without knowing it, we have changed. We try to use a map of yester-year only to discover that it is out of date.

We shudder a little as we wonder if there is anything that remains the same.

The Church tells us that there is. Through the centuries it is the one institution which points to the unchanging God, "the same yesterday, today, and forever." Worship customs may differ, but every Christian congregation seeks to lead men to the one great Certainty, which is God. That is why you will want to start attending church regularly. Here is peace. Here is assurance.
